*"Two Blue
Moons
in 2018"*

Fascinated with Blue Moons?

A double occurrence happens in 2018, then not again until 2037.

On January 2, 2018 the moon will be full. The clock keeps ticking, an average lunation cycle of approximately 29.5 days goes by and on January 31 there is another full moon. There is nothing unusual about this cycling through moon phases. Take your pick of when to start and stop to measure the cycle. First quarter to first quarter, new moon to new moon, it is just a simple cycle. But humans look for patterns, and it doesn't escape the eye, that on January's calendar page there are two full moons. We normally have only one per month in the typical month of 30-31 days, but if there is a full moon in those first days, then a second full moon can occur before the end of the month. While not astronomically significant, this second full moon in a month enjoys being named for its "not so frequent" occurrence, a Blue Moon.

If January has a Blue Moon, then the setup for a second Blue Moon in the same year is nearly assured with a February of only 28 days. In 2018, the next full moon after the January 31 is March 1-2. On March 31 the second full moon in March occurs - another Blue Moon, the second one in 2018. This nearly identical setup next happens in 2037. Now you can answer the question: "What is more rare than a Blue Moon?" Answer: a double Blue Moon year.

"Surely, the moon gets the most attention in the sky. It is the chief attraction, the first step to getting humans to understand more about the universe, and ultimately themselves."

Entire 21st Century!

Find the phase of the moon for any date of the 21st century with this detailed graphic. Shows the phase for every day of every year from 2000 to 2099 - that's all 35,625 days! Intriguing patterns! Large 22" x 72" makes this graphic a great focal point for a door or special wall spot. Rolled in clear Gift Tube. Chart available in heavy paper or laminated edition.

Find the phase for

- sky-watching dates
- birth dates
- historical dates
- vacation dates
- fishing dates
- hunting dates
- romancing dates
- special events

100 Years! Every day of every year from 2000 to 2099

This large laminated chart is 22" x 72" (fits nicely on a door) or keep it stored in its plastic tube for conveniently rolling it out on a table. Lamination allows you to draw on it with erasable markers.

21st Century Luna™

Incredible - all 36,525 moon phases in the 100 year span from 2000 to 2099. If you like looking for patterns in moon phases or are just plain curious about what the moon phase was/will be on a certain date in the 21st Century, then this chart is for you. Great for the classroom or a location where you want to make an astronomical statement.

Rolled in a clear Gift Tube with end caps.

Laminated Edition: Order Item: CENT21-L ($26.95)

Paper Edition: Order Item: CENT21-P ($20.95)
(Note: paper edition not available online - call to order.)

We also have a few 20th Century Luna charts left (unlaminated). If you want to purchase any of these, please contact us directly - not available online.

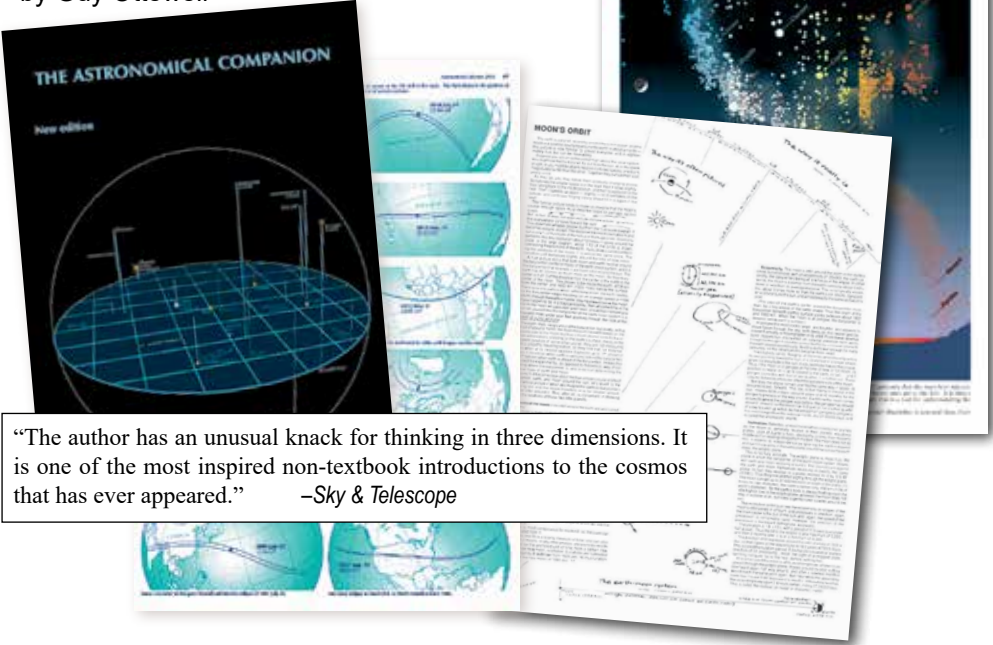

On the Cover

New Brunswick, Canada is certainly one of the areas in North America to show its autumn leaf colors early in the season. Photographer Graham Hobster captured this scene at their peak.

The Astronomical Companion

by Guy Ottewell

“The author has an unusual knack for thinking in three dimensions. It is one of the most inspired non-textbook introductions to the cosmos that has ever appeared.”
—Sky & Telescope

All the classic astronomy knowledge a beginner needs, intelligently delivered.

A general guide to astronomy; some say it should be called the Astronomical Treasury. This atlas-sized book builds a solid understanding for the coordinate systems and features of space on a series of 30 large diagrams, each of an ever expanding sphere. Move from the moon's orbit, to the planets, comets, to nearby stars, then remote stars, our Milky Way Galaxy, local group of galaxies, the Virgo cloud, and on to the limits of the universe. 11" x 15". 73 pages.

- Seasons, traditional dates, world calendars, time
- Catalogue of star name and derivations
- Coordinate systems, precession
- Moon: phases, orbit, saros, eclipses
- H-R Diagram (star color, luminosity, type)
- Catalogue of star name and derivations
- Constellations, asterisms,
- Meteor showers
- Double stars

The Under-Standing of Eclipses

5th edition by Guy Ottewell

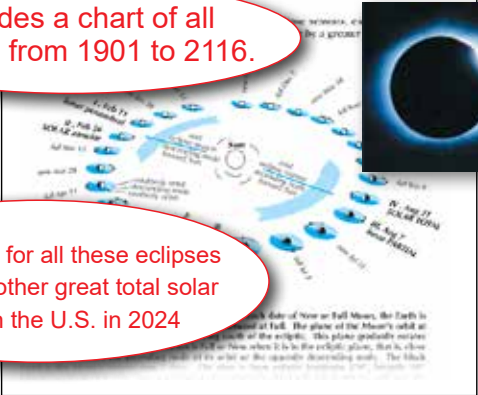

If you saw any of the grand solar eclipse that crossed the U.S. in August 2017, then perhaps you caught the bug in wanting to see more and understand more about all eclipses. It methodically explains why eclipses of the sun and moon happen, their intricate patterns in time and space - and why they are so exciting. There are page-spreads with dynamic globe diagrams, examples of the main kinds of eclipse and several curious cases such as a "broken-ring eclipse", a "geometrically tight eclipse", and a "globe-skimming eclipse". Superb illustrations, including the 12-page "bead curtain" chart of all eclipses from 1901 to 2116; "Eclipse stories" (with some cartoons); eclipses of the future; tables; index. 114 pages.

Order Item: TUSE ($25.95)

Includes a chart of all eclipses from 1901 to 2116.

Get planning for all these eclipses including another great total solar eclipse in the U.S. in 2024

Planispheres

The basic tool for all sky watching.

Miller Planispheres are the premiere star finder. Durable plastic disks and accurate cartography with instructions right on the back. Large 10.5" diameter makes it easy to read but it's still easy to pack for a trip. Specify model number (see map) as part of the item code. (Example: MPL40 covers latitudes 35N-45N).

Order Item: MPL(model xx) ($12.95)

Did you know?

You can use your planisphere to determine

- your sky right now
- your sky for a future date
- sunrise/sunset
- best months to view a constellation
- rise/set/transit of specific star

Choose from Four Planisphere Models

Locate your area to determine which latitude Model (22, 30, 40, 50 degree) is best. If you do not specify, we will select the best model based on your address. Call us if you need help.

Moons and Blooms™ A Gardener's Joy

Splendid reference gift for the gardener who is also a sky watcher.

- A Garden by Bloom Date
- Daily Moon Phases
- Plant Reference Guide
- Helps in understanding phenology - recurring sequences/cycles

Flowers bloom alongside the daily phases of the moon in this delightful combination timeline calendar. While you've known that plants repeat their cycles year to year, the term "phenology" defines the phenomenon of biologic cycles. Shifting climate/weather has been playing havoc with the stability of prediction of first bloom dates, but we've done our best to hit the average dates.

Over 75 named flowering plant illustrations are positioned on their approximate first bloom date. Watercolor art brings life to our annual garden. Complete moon phase information will keep you checking day-by-day. MoonWatcher and Plant Bloom guide sheets included. Printed on recycled paper. 17.75" x 23.75". Rolled in a clear Gift Tube with end caps.

Your City and Moon Calendar Art

A city's skyline has become an iconic emblem for the place you live. We have started a series we call MyCityMoon combining an artistic view of representative city skyline with our moon calendar poster format. Now you can boast your city on your wall.

To localize the calendar to your city, the moon phase illustrations and time/date information is produced for the city's time zone - no need to convert the time/date from Universal Time. Read the correct local time directly from your calendar. We have even allowed for Daylight Saving time changes where appropriate.

Don't see your city? We are adding new ones on a regular basis, so check our website for the latest list.

Printed on heavy coated poster paper and rolled into a clear plastic Gift Tube. A localized MoonWatcher Guide sheet is included in each calendar.

Supermoons? How to spot them!

The moon's elliptical orbit around the earth puts it sometimes at points farthest away (apogee) and closest (perigee) from the earth. These distances change a little bit from one perigee to the next. In a given year one could find one perigee closer than the rest. When a perigee and the full/new moon happen on the same date we have what is popularly known as a "Supermoon." There is more hype than substance attached with the visual aspects to these events. Accounts of previous full moon supermoons have vastly overstated how much larger and brighter the moon would be. Astronomers have long known these and call them a perigean full/new moon (or perigee full/new moon). More important is to know that every perigee coincident with either a full or new moon has much more noticeable impact in higher and lower tide height/depth values. The closest full moon nearly coincident with a perigee occurs on January 1-2. A slightly more distant perigee of January 30 is nearly coincident with the full moon of January 31, 2018.

Sure, the calendars are elegant, but they are useful as well... with references to Solstices, Equinoxes, Eclipses, Apogee, Perigee, Moon Phases, etc.
